MARCH 29, 2025 | VOL LX NO 13

The Economic Fallout of European Rearmament

- 10 With the US President leaning towards Russia in dialogues about the Ukraine war and making clear that the US will no longer foot the bill to ensure Europe's security, talk of "Russian expansionism" in Europe has become louder.
— C P Chandrasekhar

Questions of Language, Education, and Caste

- 12 Amid ongoing debates on the language and education policies of the nation state, this article rethinks the promise of radical equality and the question of experiential community through schooling in the context of a warring world.
— Dickens Leonard

Raising Farmers' Income

- 15 A legal guarantee of agricultural prices at the minimum support price may address only the price risk and cannot assure farmers' incomes as the remaining risks still persist. — A Amarendra Reddy, Tulsi Lingareddy

The Beginning of a Sino-US Technology War

- 20 The race for supremacy in artificial intelligence has significant implications for global productivity and competitiveness and is akin to the space race of the 1960s. — Parthapratim Pal, Partha Ray

Increase in Market Price of Onion

- 24 This article examines supply shortages and other factors driving price hikes in onion, despite its increased production, while proposing measures to stabilise prices using secondary data analysis. — P Alli

Israeli-Palestinian Conflict

- 32 The revision of Israeli democracy and the failure of dominant discourse within the Oslo framework to explain the recurrence of violence have steered the popular discussion away from the consensus that reinforces the Israeli perspective. — S S Tabraz

Trade Liberalisation and Manufacturing

- 40 India's trade performance post-liberalisation is examined, focusing on export margins and competitiveness in the organised manufacturing sector. Significant growth in both exports and imports is observed. While India's extensive margin has been robust, intensive margins show limited improvement. — R Rijesh

Spatio-temporal Analysis of Dowry Crimes

- 49 While the number of dowry deaths has remained almost stable, the incidents of violation of the Dowry Prohibition Act have increased gradually. Uttar Pradesh and Bihar emerge as the hotspots of dowry deaths in India. The high number of dowry cases pending in the courts also highlights the inefficiency of the judiciary. — Rambooshan Tiwari, Shubham Narayan Dixit

Equity in Universal Health Coverage in Rural India

- 55 The Pradhan Mantri Jan Arogya Yojana extends benefits based on various inclusion criteria. These inclusion criteria are evaluated using the equity lens for rural India. While PM-JAY was launched to safeguard vulnerable households, lower-income households are doubly excluded from enrolment in PM-JAY and healthcare access. — Dinesh Ahirwal, Anjali Dhengle

Women in Grassroots Governance in Kerala

- 63 The article delineates the involvement and impact of women in local governance in Kerala, along with the challenges impeding their active engagement at the grassroots level. — Nithya N R

Jammu and Kashmir's Political Future

- 69 While Rekha Chowdhary's insights highlight key political shifts after the Jammu and Kashmir assembly elections, factors such as delimitation and security that shape the evolving political landscape need to be examined further.
— Misbah Rashid

Green Narratives in Academic Gardens: Implementing Sustainability in Universities

Rupali Satsangi*, J K Verma, and Prem Kumar Kalra

Sustainability is increasingly becoming a central focus on college campuses. Numerous prospective students evaluate their choices based on the extent of sustainable practices their desired institutions embrace. The belief that sustainable initiatives are inherently complex is frequently misleading; in truth, many actions can be as straightforward as choosing a reusable water bottle over a plastic one. More comprehensive endeavors, such as establishing and nurturing a campus garden, can further advance sustainability efforts. This article examines the concept of sustainability, its advantages, its significance within higher education, and strategies for its implementation and promotion.

Sustainability fundamentally represents a social vision aiming to prioritise productive work, adequate comfort and security, a clean and safe environment, good health, and opportunities for personal growth. Embracing a sustainability mindset signifies a lifestyle choice where education is crucial in fostering environmental consciousness. It highlights the influence of both individuals and communities on nature and climate.

Sustainable practices are gaining traction across college and university campuses, enhancing the quality of life within the campus and adjacent communities. This approach addresses energy use, economic stability, community welfare, and technological progress. Sustainable living creates a lively, empathetic, innovative, and adaptable atmosphere for learning, working, and living in, especially on campuses committed to integrating sustainability throughout their planning, educational programs, and extracurricular activities.

For many students, environmental protection might not be their primary concern. However, the local ecosystem is affected by the habits of those residing in it, which also holds for college and university settings. Given their substantial student populations, university campuses often generate more waste than other residential types.

Although the notion of sustainability is relatively recent, its origins can be traced back to movements focused on social justice, conservation, and international cooperation. By the late twentieth
